ENGLAND WANTS A DAY FOR BIG CELEBRATION.

AN EFFORT IS BEING MADE TO CREATE A "VICTORIA DAY" AND MAKE OF IT A REGULAR "FOURTH OF JULY."

SPECIAL BY CARLE. London, May 25.—(Copyright, 1901, by the New York Herald Company.)—The Whitsun days are upon us. Under ordinary circumstances the week just ended ought to have been the beginning of the height of the season, for the Queen's birthday week was always reckened a live-

Though the event to which, for the last three score years, all Britons have been in the habit of looking forward to, to hold high holiday and thanksgiving, is not being allowed to drop by order of the King, there has been only that picturesque ceremony of "trooping the colors" to remind us of what th was once.

The Queen's birthday week, which was always the occasion of a great many brillant functions, has been, so far as these eptions and dinners are concerned, an solute blank.

VICTORIA DAY MAY BECOME BRITISH FOURTH OF JULY. By the way, when one thinks of it, there ething rather curious in the fact that the British have no great anniversary, like the Fourth of July, celebrated throughout the whole land.

she whole land.

America has such a great anniversary.

France has some half a dozen.

Perhaps next year will see Victoria day change the state of things—certainly it will not be king Edward's fault if it does not—making the fifth bank holiday in the year, this to the mixed joy of employers and employers

KING EDWARD REPRINANDS THOSE WHO GIVE DANCES.

That society does not relish going through he season without any balls is becoming nore apparent. In fact, I hear that the King has private-

In fact, I hear that the King has privately had to repeat his request about no dances, though if people who issue invitations to private dinners have dancing afterward, that is quite a different matter, in his Majesty's opinion.

But he has had to reprimand certain ladies associated with the household about holding and attending dances.

But, for all that, there are plenty of amusements going on, and there is no lack of events to talk about.

BRITISHERS PLEASED WITH THE KING'S SHOW OF PLUCK.

That unfortunate mishap to the Sham-rock II has been, of course, the chief topic f conversation. Everywhere, from royal circles right down to the messenger boy in the street, remarks have been made of the King's coolness aboard the yacht when the disaster oc-

From what one learns, these are no mere laudatory platitudes, such as are invariably spoken when royalty is in danger.

DETERMINED TO WITNESS THE NEXT SHAMROCK TRIAL.

I now learn that the King has privately signified his intention, if he can, of witness-ing the next trial of the Shamrock II, deing the next trial of the Shamrock II, despite his narrow escape, though, from what I also hear in certain circles, some pressure may be brought to bear to prevent him toing so; not merely on account of any danger or of fears of a repetition of Wednesday's mishap, but because, though his Majesty may choose his incognito, as it were, as a private gentleman and a good sportsman, he is still the King.

NOT VERY HOPEFUL

Sir Thomas Lipton himself, though naturally awfully cut up about the disaster, is still as confident as ever that the new boat will prove faster than the old.

But experienced critics are less so since place or are about to take place in all the royal palaces.

The old furniture is being turned out and disposed of, for, you know, the late Queen had many sentimental ideas about the furnishings around her and would not allow the old things to be taken away.

Even upholstery, when it wore out, had to be replaced with other as nearly as prescribe like the old.

possible like the old.

TAKING AN INVENTORY OF ROYAL WINE CELLARS.

Even the wines in Buckingham and Windsor palaces are in course of being over-

Few persons may imagine what immense stocks of wines are hidden beneath both buildings. Nobody even yet knows, not even the King himself, what these cellars contain, though it will soon now be revealed.

These wines have been accumulating for years, even from the time when the Queen came to the throne, and have been constantly added to since.

In the old sherry drinking days large quantities of that wine were purchased and stowed away. When sherry went out and whisky came in, the sherry bins remained untouched. In that condition they have now been found.

Of backs moselles and champagnes these have now been found.

Of hocks, moselies and champagnes there have been found a great abundance. The late Prince Consort was particularly fond of these first-named wines. He acquired some very fine vintages.

These have been used lately only in the shape of hock and moselle cups at the royal garden parties and at state balls and concerts.

THIRTY NEW PORTRAITS OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS.

OF HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS.

A new portrait of the King by Luke Fildes is to be started almost immediately. About thirty is the number of replicas likely to be required for the embassies and Government houses of the colonies. The idea that Mr. Fildes himself can paint these, as is seen remarked with curious innocence by some of the papers, is quite absurd. Such work would become maddening in its monotony to any artist.

Mr. Fildes will paint the first portrait and superintend the reproductions, finally passing on them.

ng on them. ing on them.

The position of understudy to Mr. Fildes seems to be a much-coveted one, for much pressure in favor of the candidates—many more than are required—has made itself elt at court.

As I have already stated, the delegates of the New York Chamber of Commerce will have in England the welcome justly due the representatives of a people who are unstinted in their hospitality to English folk.

The step is made necessary by the growth in population of Madison County, and a consequent increase in the number of inmates of its different institutions. Another factor is a rule just adopted by the board which does away with a practice of paying rent for rooms or dwellings in different places for indigent persons who do not care to go to the County Farm.

A Household Treasure

Wine of Cardui has been a household treasure with us. When I married Mrs. Snapp my friends ridiculed me and asked me why I married a dead person. They said she would not live until fall. She then weighed less than 100 pounds. Now she weighs 145 pounds. She has three boys, the last weighing 91/2 pounds at birth and the other two 10 pounds each. That was her exclusive medicine and I am so well pleased with what it has done for her. We are willing to do you all the good we can for suffering humanity.

Mrs. Snapp has health and children, instead of waiting a slow death amid the gloom of a barren home. Instead of her own cry of pain breaking the silence of a darkened sick room, the prattle of her three children let sunshine into her heart. No wonder her husband writes of Wine of Cardui as a "household treasure". The Snapp family owe to Wine of Cardui all in life worth living for. A healthy mother is the foundation of a happy home. For fifty years has made happy mothers of sick and emaciated women. Thousands of women have written grateful letters with the same joyful ring as this letter from Ohio. The letters tell of freedom from those dragging monthly pains and of complete cures of the worst cases of falling of the womb, "whites" and the terrible headaches and backaches that follow menstrual disorders. They show that suffering the pangs of female ills is unnecessary when Wine of Cardui can be secured. Why do you suffer when such testimony is placed before you? Druggists sell $1.00 bottles.
